Sometimes it takes a glamorous aesthetician who was born in Poland, trained in France and then toiled in Manhattan to really get it. Five years after she opened Rescue, Danuta Mieloch remains peerless. Her space: spare yet luxurious, central yet secluded. Her products: splurge-y yet essential. (Show us a Philadelphienne who doesn't douse her face and décolletage in Biologique's P-50 toner and we'll show you a poseur.) Her staff: in addition to her flawless self, prodigiously talented practitioners of beauty as a religion - Nives Riddles on makeup and brows, Tirzah Fowler and Erika Ianoale on facials and waxing, Anna Maria Hernandez on nails. Her services: a standard yet preeminent menu that includes now-classic Bio-Lift and microdermabrasion, for plump and polish, respectively. Her reservations book: full.
